

Save The Environment (STE), a registered NGO based in Kolkata, West Bengal (dedicated largely towards eradication of groundwater arsenic poisoning, environment protection, water management and health improvement) successfully organized the two-day online International Conference on 'Environment, Water, Agriculture, Sustainability & Health (EWASH-2021): United Together in the Battle against Pandemic, on 21st – 22nd January, 2022, in joint collaboration with Department of Chemistry, Hindu College, Delhi University and in association with CSIR- National Environmental Engineering Research Institute, Royal Society of Chemistry London- North India Section and Environment and Social Development Association (ESDA), Delhi.

Around 350 delegates including the life members of STE society participated in the EWASH-2021 conference, which was very kindly supported by NABARD. The conference was an intellectual amalgamation of expert academicians, eminent scientists, policy makers, environmentalists, industry personnel and contemporary researchers who engaged on various pertinent topics about deep rooted environmental issues and sustainable approaches to solve existing environmental problems on the local, national, and global scale, especially as the world strives to recover from the pandemic phase. Enlightening keynote and invited talks were delivered by distinguished scientists of national and international repute. Noteworthy oral and poster presentation sessions were conducted. Numerous student activities were organized that enunciated innovative solutions from young minds to solve environmental crises.

This was also the 3rd Annual Meet of Save The Environment where eminent researchers and pioneers who have inspirationally contributed towards water conservation, environmental protection and social upliftment in recent times were felicitated. Prof. Sandeep Verma, Secretary, SERB, Dept. of Science & Technology, Govt. of India & Professor, IIT Kanpur and Shri. S.K. Varshney, Head, International Cooperation, Dept. of Science & Technology, Govt. of India graced the event as Honorable Chief Guests in the inaugural session and valedictory session, respectively.
